

As San Ramon City Councilmember Phil O'Loane said in December 2014, the proposed Creekside Memorial Park Cemetery is "an idea whose time has come and gone."

This map shows the residential developments, schools, and commercial operations along the routes to the proposed Creekside Memorial Park cemetery. When this cemetery was first proposed in 2005, there were very few housing developments or schools in this area (light red on the map), but since then, many more have been built or are under construction (dark red on the map). This growth means that it would be impossible for funeral processions to reach the site of the proposed cemetery without driving past many residential developments and schools.

The proposed cemetery plans to hold 900 funerals per year, or about three funerals per day. Every day, these three funeral processions would have to travel along either Camino Tassajara (if coming from Danville or points north), or Tassajara Road (if coming from Dublin or Pleasanton or points south), or Fallon Road/Tassajara Road (if coming from Livermore or points east), or Windemere Parkway/Camino Tassajara (if coming from San Ramon or points west).

But the impact of this daily reminder of death on the residents—and their children—who live, work, and go to school along these routes has not been considered by the Contra Costa County decision-makers. Many of these nearby communities did not exist when the cemetery was first proposed, and many who now live in these communities were not aware when they bought their homes that a cemetery was being proposed nearby.

Back in 2005, the City/Town Councils for the four Tri-Valley cities and towns closest to the proposed cemetery—San Ramon, Dublin, Danville, and Pleasanton—each passed a resolution supporting the proposed cemetery. But in 2014, public outcry about the project was a major factor in the San Ramon City Council's decision to reverse their original support for the proposed cemetery, and send a letter to the County stating that the city now opposes the proposal.

How can you help stop the proposed cemetery? The residents of the other Tri-Valley cities—especially Dublin, whose residents along Tassajara Road and Fallon Road would likely see most of the funeral processions, since they live along the closest approach from Highway 580—can ask their City/Town Councils to change their position to opposing the proposed cemetery and to let the County know about it with a letter or a resolution. The final decision will be made by the Contra Costa County Supervisors, but the opinions of the Tri-Valley City/Town Councils are given heavy consideration in the decision process.

Other ways to help: Sign the online petition (link at www.StopTheCemetery.org), and come to the public meetings that Contra Costa County will hold in 2016 (no details available yet).

We can't say it enough! The proposed Creekside Memorial Park Cemetery is "an idea whose time has come and gone."
